

CORTRIGHT CASE WILL CLOSE TO-DAY

Entire Week Taken Up on Practically One Case—One More Case To Be Tried.

Two cases were disposed of Monday afternoon without the jury drawn going out of the box. The first was that of F. B. Lawson against Hyman Weitzer for wages. Mr. Lawson was sworn and testified that he worked at Braman for Mr. Weitzer from July 20th until Aug. 12th last, amounting to $66.30. As no witness appeared in the behalf of the defendant, the court instructed the jury to render a verdict in favor of Mr. Lawson in the sum of $72.26, which was the amount due, together with interest.

The second case which was appealed from the justice's transcript was that of Charles E. Knapp against Fred E. Stinnard. The defendant claimed that he paid the judgment in full, but as the plaintiff offered no evidence the court ordered the judgment settled. The jury so agreed.

C. A. Cortright and son, Eugene, composing the firm of C. A. Cortright & Son, are plaintiffs in the case against F. W. Kreitner and W. H. Kreitner, contractors and others, defendants. Mr. Cortright was represented by Homer Greene, assisted by E. C. Mumford, while Messrs. Kreitner counsel was W. H. Lee, assisted by M. E. Simons. Mr. Greene opened the case.

Eugene H. Cortright was the first witness sworn. He testified in his behalf, telling of the conversation he had with Kreitner Bros. previous to the erection of the building, its construction, of which material would be used and how he desired it built. Mr. Cortright said he had the foundation wall laid by F. J. Varcoe and that Jules Dunn helped in the work. These walls were separate and apart from the main wall, which were of two piece or double concrete blocks, one foot high and two feet long. They were manufactured by the Wayne Concrete Supply Company of Honesdale.

The blocks were laid by Pierce & Baker. Eberley Skinner sworn: Stated that he had been around the barn nearly every day during course of erection with the exception of six weeks spent in Brooklyn. Said he was on the barn the day it fell and saw blocks around the sides of the wall. Was in the office when barn collapsed.

Mr. Colvill, of Pittston, was sworn and said he built warehouses and other buildings for several years. Told the construction of the stringers, how they were placed, the location of the cross rods and the construction of the roof. Said he never saw a building erected like it before.

B. L. Holbert, sworn. Said he was standing on the step of his store when the Cortright barn fell on the evening of October 24th. He said noise sounded like a crashing or like the breaking of timbers. Stated that he rushed over and helped carry Mr. Cortright, Eugene's father, from the office to his home after which he helped get out some horses from the basement of the new barn.

Eugene Baker, sworn. Live in Carbondale and am a member of the firm of Pierce & Baker, the firm that contracted with Mr. Cortright to erect the brick blocks of the barn. Saw the plans which were in our possession about two hours. Came to Honesdale when contract was started and four or five times afterward. Saw plans and front elevation of first floor of building showing the doorway and windows.

William D. Lane, Carbondale, sworn. Said he was employed by Pierce & Baker as foreman to lay the concrete blocks on the barn. Said he never saw a block like this kind before and consequently never laid a block like it. Had charge of the work for Mr. Pierce.

H. F. Weaver sworn. Am an architect. Have worked at this work the last 17 years and prior to that time was a contractor and builder. Worked under a number of best architects of the day. Witness mentioned who they were and told some of the large buildings he built, also mentioned structure which he designed and had the superintendency over in Honesdale. Went in description of building. Exhibit was shown illustrating how building was constructed, plan of girders, supporters, posts, etc. The sketch was made by Mr. Weaver after the barn fell. Mr. Weaver was upon the stand an hour and a half, which was spent in direct and cross-examination.

David Fisher sworn. Said he was a junk dealer. Stated that Mr. Cortright and Fred Kreitner visited his place and selected the kind and weight of iron that was intended to be used in the barn. Only the iron posts and 56-pound rails were selected with the two gentlemen visited his place. Witness read list of material purchased and also gave dates of purchase. Said the first load was delivered by his team and the balance was taken to the building by Mr. Cortright's men. Said Mr. Cortright selected what he wanted after he and Mr. Kreitner visited his yard. Was there several times.

John Ridd sworn. Live in Oregon. Mr. Kreitner bought about 1,800 feet of lumber of me for Cortright's barn.

Horace Marsh sworn. Worked for Mr. Kreitner on Cortright barn in July. Think it was about two weeks. Saw Mr. Kreitner there nearly every day. On cross-examination Mr. Marsh was asked if he was sure that he worked that length of time to which he said he thought it was. Mr. Marsh was recalled Wednesday morning and the defendant's attorney again asked Mr. Marsh if it was not a fact that he worked there about 2 1/2 days and he said he thought it was two or three days, that he couldn't remember which.

Edward Pierce sworn. Said he lived in Carbondale and that he was a member of the firm of Pierce & Baker, contractors who laid the concrete blocks above the foundation for the Cortright barn. He said that he had done a general building business for the past ten years. Had built some brick buildings. This was the first concrete building erected where this kind of blocks were used. Visited the barn four or five times during course of erection. Staid about 15 minutes at each time. Saw W. H. Kreitner on site. Didn't say anything to him about the building, just passed the time of day with him.

Other witnesses were laborers of the plaintiff, with the exception of Charles E. Knapp, who stated that he heard the crash in Schoell's barber shop that evening. The witnesses testified in order given and were as follows: Samuel Vadge, June Decker, Jules Dunn, Edward Hempstead, Albert Thomas, Raymond Ashby, Lloyd Campbell, Jules Dunn testified that he made the window frames for the barn under measurements given him by Mr. Kreitner.

The plaintiff rested Wednesday at noon.

Attorney W. H. Lee opened the defense and W. H. Kreitner was the first witness sworn. He said he had been a resident of Honesdale about 20 years and was a contractor and builder. Stated that he erected about 50 dwelling houses in Honesdale besides numerous brick buildings which witness mentioned. Told of conversation he had with E. H. Cortright regarding the erection of the building, how he (Kreitner) made a pencil sketch of the foundation, what lumber was selected, of going to Fisher's junk yard for iron posts. Denied having purchased or negotiated with Mr. Fisher for any rails or other iron. Said he was around the building only 14 hours during course of construction, which he charged for with the exception of when he measured the basement for the foundation, the placing of the posts and the surveying, which amounted to $6. Witness said his brother, W. H. Kreitner, was on job longer than he was and that there were from three to four of their men working on the barn during the time of construction. Mr. Kreitner stated that Mr. Cortright's first plan was to construct a barn with posts right through the building from floor to floor. When witness asked about the posts being in the way on the first floor at the entrance, Mr. Cortright said he didn't think about that. Witness stated that a few days afterward that instead of posts Mr. Cortright was going to use a truss. Witness said that Mr. Cortright stated that in Carbondale there was a building that had a truss with an 80-foot span and if that building held over there there would appear to be no reason why a 60-foot truss span would not hold over here, that he (Kreitner) was going to risk it. Witness said he did not approve of using a truss that he did not have much experience with them and would rather he not use it. Witness said he ordered two truss rods in Scranton of Finch & Co. Did not give any dimensions as to the thickness of the rods. Witness testified that he visited the building not many times while the woodwork was being erected. Had nothing whatever to do with the rest of the building. Was on roof the day before the barn collapsed. Saw a pile of blocks about 5 to 7 feet high, 14 feet long and about 8 feet across. Would judge there were about 450 blocks in the pile. They were located on the roof a short distance from the elevator. Some blocks were distributed around the sides of the building. While returning home, passing over the highroads the next day about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, the same day and 7 in the evening, witness stated that he observed the pile of blocks standing in the same place as they were the previous day. Mr. Kreitner estimated that the building could be rebuilt for $640.

William H. Kreitner, brother of Fred W. Kreitner, corroborated his brother's testimony. On account of the illness of his wife, E. A. Marshall, of Palmyra, was excused on Wednesday and by request W. B. Guinnip, of Atco, was excused on Thursday.

Owing to the panel of jurors being exhausted the court directed Sheriff F. C. Kimble to snap three jurors. To complete a jury to try the case of Thomas vs. Norton, John Shupper, Arthur Hager and Jacob F. Baumann were chosen.

DEATH CLAIMS GEORGE H. BIRDSALL

Brother of William S. and James C. Birdsall of Seelyville, Pa.

George H. Birdsall, one of the best known and most highly respected residents of Scranton, died Tuesday night at his residence, 8 Quincy avenue and Vine street, after a brief illness although he had not been in strong health for two years.

Mr. Birdsall was the son of the late James and Hannah Scott Birdsall, and was born in Carbondale in 1868 and began his business career. In June, 1873, he married Miss Amanda Van Keuren, of Honesdale. He is survived by his wife and their only child, Grace, Mrs. Frederick P. Stapf, of Philadelphia, also by two brothers, William S. and James C. Birdsall, of Seelyville, Pa.

Mr. Birdsall had been identified for many years with general fire insurance. He had a very wide circle of acquaintances. Gentle, unassuming and kind, his cultivated tastes and his courtly manner made and held friends wherever he went.

Interment was made in Honesdale Thursday morning, with Rev. W. H. Swift of the Presbyterian church, officiating.

—Miss Ida Coots of Cochection, had the honor of being one of the guests at the Shepard-Gould wedding on last Wednesday. Miss Coots has been Mrs. Shepard's private secretary for over 15 years.

DAMASCUS ITEMS INTERESTINGLY TOLD.

Trio of Township Young Men May Receive Carnegie Medal For Their Heroism—Fred Price Has Thrilling Experience.

Damascus, Jan. 30. Quarterly meeting services were held in the M. E. church last Sunday. Superintendent Murdock was present. Quarterly conference on the preceding afternoon. Rev. Murdock preached at Calkins Sunday afternoon and Rev. Oliver filled his regular appointment at Galliee.

Mrs. Anderson, of Eighth avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., who, with her two children, and sister recently spent a couple of weeks with their uncle, K. P. Johnston, has undergone a difficult surgical operation since her return home. At last report she was in a critical condition. While here, Rev. A. C. Oliver chlistened her two months old son, Robert.

Fred S. Price recently had a very thrilling experience though of very brief duration. He had a drop reaper which he wished to move from his farm near here to his blacksmith shop in Tyler Hill to be broken up for scrap. He hitched a pair of young horses to it to make the transfer. He was obliged to drive over some large chunks of wood before getting the old junk to the main road. In passing over one of these obstructions, he was partly unseated and in attempting to save himself he threw out his right foot which was caught in a notch that had been broken out of the side of the drive wheel rim and was being rapidly carried with this wheel on its revolution. To add to the complication one of the horses stepped on a board which snapped asunder with a loud report. This frightened the animals and they spurted ahead, the wheel carrying Mr. Price's imprisoned foot down through about a four-inch space between the wheel and the frame of the machine. Mr. Price said he shut his eyes at this point of the fracas, thinking his doom was at hand, but maintained his usual level headedness, guiding the animals as best he could from his uncomfortable position. As soon as he could find his voice he quieted the animals and brought them to a halt. It would be drawing it mildly to say that Mr. Price was frightened, for as he himself said, he was scared through and through. He came out of the mishap with whole bones, but with some sore muscles and sprained tendons. His shoe on that foot plainly shows the imprint of an inch square nut that was pressed against it by the wheel in its circular motion.

Post card greeting from Hon. Daniel Clark Jackson and wife of Harrisburg, where the former is now in attendance at the session of the Legislature, state that both are well. It also stated that during the recent intermission taken by that august body of law makers at the State Capitol, they visited their son, Henry Grant Jackson in Pittsburg. The latter is a manager for a large ice cream establishment in that city.

A project is on foot to secure a Carnegie hero medal for Harry J. Smith, Myron Lord and Cecil Abraham who saved Oscar Smithers from drowning in the old reservoir near Tyler Hill village, where he broke through the ice while skating on Wednesday, Dec. 11, 1912. The matter has been presented and is under consideration.

LEIB IS ELECTED RESIDENT CLERK

Man Whose First Election Proved Illegal, Wins Out in Hard Contest.

William S. Leib, of Schuylkill, was re-elected resident clerk of the house Tuesday morning at 1:52 o'clock on the fifteenth ballot. Eleven ballots were taken, Leib climbing from ninety-six. Most of the Democrats voted for Arthur McKean, Beaver, and Progressives for W. P. Young, Montgomery.

On the fourteenth ballot J. R. K. Scott and Speaker Alter, who had voted for Young, voted for Leib, who also received some Democratic votes. On the next ballot Leib climbed to 102, needing just one. McClintock, Philadelphia, then changed after having voted for Young. This gave Leib the election. The final ballot resulted: Leib, 103; McKean, 75; Young, 26. Necessary to elect 103.

G. A. Baldwin and Mr. Swift seconded the nomination of Arthur McKean, of Beaver, a Progressive Democrat, who had been endorsed by the Democratic caucus and by some of the Progressive Republicans and Washington party men. The action of W. P. Young, Progressive, of Pottstown, in remaining in the race for resident clerk aided in the deadlock, for Mr. Young and Mr. McKean together had more votes than were required to elect a resident clerk.

On the first six ballots all of the Republican-Washington members of Lackawanna voted for Leib, Mr. Mannion voted for McKean, and H. C. Jackson, of Wayne, voted for McKean. E. E. Jones of Susquehanna, was absent.

PROTECTION FOR THE WORK HORSE.

A law is now being framed which will place the work horse on a same plane as the workman in a demand for shorter hours. The workingman is demanding and receiving shorter hours and more pay, but the proposed legislation does not include a provision for more feed for Dobbin.

The humane measure in question is being drafted by J. Clarence Funk president of the Harrisburg Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, at the instance of the Pennsylvania Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

MR. ROCKEFELLER JR., ON SOCIAL HYGIENE

In a Statement Sent Out Recently He Declares That Man, Not Woman is Guilty of Commercializing Social Wrong.

The Bureau of Social Hygiene came into existence about two years ago, as a result of the work of the Special Grand Jury appointed to investigate the white slave traffic in New York City, which served during the first half of the year 1910. One of the recommendations made by it in the presentment handed up at the termination of its labors was that a public commission be appointed to study the social evil. The foreman of that body subsequently gave careful consideration to the character of the work which might properly be done by such a commission and the limitations under which it would operate. In this connection separate, personal conferences were held with over a hundred leading men and women in the city, among whom were lawyers, physicians, business men, bank presidents, presidents of commercial organizations, clergymen, settlement workers, social workers, labor leaders and reformers. These conferences developed the feeling that a public commission would labor under a number of disadvantages, such as the fact that it would be short lived; that the work would be done publicly that at best it could hardly do more than present recommendations. The conviction also grew that the main reason why more permanent results had not been obtained by the various organizations which had dealt with the subject of the social evil during the past ten or fifteen years was that most of them were temporary. While active, they materially improved the situation, but as their efforts were relaxed, there came the inevitable return to much the same conditions as before. The forces of evil are never greatly alarmed at the organization of investigating or reform bodies, for they know that they are generally composed of busy people, who cannot turn aside from their own affairs for any great length of time to carry on reforms, and that sooner or later their efforts will cease, and the patient denizens of the underworld and their exploiters can then reappear and continue the traffic as formerly.

Therefore, as the initial step, in the winter of 1911 The Bureau of Social Hygiene was formed. Its present members are Miss Katharine Bement Davis, Superintendent of the New York State Reformatory for Women at Bedford Hills, New York; Paul M. Warburg, of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Company; Starr J. Murphy, of the New York Bar; and John D. Rockefeller, Jr. As the work develops, new members may be added.

One of the first things undertaken by the Bureau was the establishment at Bedford Hills, adjacent to the Reformatory, of a Laboratory of Social Hygiene, under Miss Davis' direction. In this Laboratory, it is proposed to study from the physical, mental, social and moral side each person committed to the Reformatory. This study will be carried on by experts and each case will be kept under observation for from three weeks to three months, as may be required. When the diagnosis is completed, it is hoped that the Laboratory will be in position to recommend the treatment most likely to reform the individual, or, if reformation is impossible, to recommend permanent custodial care. Furthermore, reaching out beyond the individuals involved, it is believed that thus important contributions may be made to a fuller knowledge of the conditions ultimately responsible for vice. If this experiment is successful, the principle may prove applicable to all classes of criminals and the conditions precedent to crime, and lead to lines of action not only more scientific and humane but also less wasteful than those at present followed.

At the same time, the Bureau was fortunate in securing the services of Abraham Flexner, whose reports on the medical schools in this country and in Europe are so well known, to study the social evil and the various methods of dealing with it in the leading cities of Europe. Mr. Flexner spent the greater part of a year abroad, making a searching and exhaustive inquiry into the subject, and is now working on his report, which will be ready for publication this winter.

These studies are to be followed by others, in those cities in the United States where different conditions exist or where special methods of dealing with the social evil have been introduced, the object being to become familiar with all phases of the subject and all methods of handling it which have been tried in this country and in Europe.
